

The free flow of accurate and balanced news and information is vital to the health of a democracy. Turning over the control of that flow to a few corporations inherently focused on profits rather than the public good will cause untold harm to American civic society.